Article Summary

Washington (CNN)

The Democrat who will face off against Texas Sen. Ted Cruz in the Texas Senate race later this year is defending his position on gun control in a state that highly values its Second Amendment rights.

"I think a lot of Texans are wondering who it is that Ted Cruz represents in the Senate. He's taken hundreds of thousands of dollars from the (National Rifle Association)," Rep. Beto O'Rourke said of Cruz in an interview Wednesday with CNN's Alisyn Camerota on "New Day"

"We have a great tradition and culture of gun ownership and gun safety for hunting, for sport, for self-defense," O'Rourke said. "I think that can allow Texas to take the lead on a really tough issue, which the country is waiting for leadership and action on." With primary ending, Cruz takes opening shot at Beto O'Rourke's name.

When asked if he thinks his gun stances may cost him the election, O'Rourke said, "I've got to face my kids and my conscience and do the right thing when we have the opportunity to do the right thing."

Cruz argued in an interview on "New Day" earlier Wednesday that O'Rourke cannot win in Texas with his pro-gun control stances.

"He's embracing positions like aggressive advocacy of gun control and undermining our Second Amendment," Cruz argued. "Now, those are wonderfully popular positions if you're running for the Senate in New York or Massachusetts or California. But this is Texas. Those are not the views of the vast majority of Texans."

CHALLENGES THAT WE OVERCOME:

RICKY: Learning to work in a team: github, updating retros, assigning duties

RICKY: New Technologies: Django, D3, Sentiment analysis--alien technologies become less mystic

RICKY: Scope: having to lower expectations to just West Virginia and a couple of others.

PATRYCJA: Identifying our individual strengths and interest to split the work.

CHALLENGES THAT WE STRUGGLE WITH:

SARAH: we need to identify and explain blocking issues earlier so that we can be prepared to help each other more during class time

SARAH:making github issues align more with user stories but also balance with our current focus/problems

RICKY:Django: connecting it all together.

RICKY:Vision: How to design a website that stands out from the rest?

PATRYCJA: Meeting our deadlines, committing to the project.

RENAT: Struggling with Django
